Directors An van Dienderen , Rosine Mbakam & Eléonore Yameogo
Moderator Lennart Soberon (VUB and artistic coordinator KASK Cinema)

For PRISM Belgian filmmaker An van Dienderen invited Brussels based Rosine Mbakam from Cameroon and Paris based Eléonore Yameogo from Burkina Faso to work together on a film in which the differences in their skin color serves as a departure to explore their experiences with the biased limitations of the medium. Photographic media are technologically and ideologically biased, favoring Caucasian skin. Such Qwhite-centricity means that the photographic media assume, privilege and construct whiteness.
